

08.01.13
NATIONAL GIRLFRIENDS DAY

Ditch the bros for some margs and mani-pedi time with your girls. Clinique's new summer shades in Pinkini, 70° and Sunny, and Hula Skirt bring beachy vibes—minus the sand ($16 each, clinique.com).

BOOKS

The Virgins FICTION
by Pamela Erens

When a bookish girl meets a druggie bad boy at boarding school, they form an unlikely pair who shock fellow classmates with their explicit sexual displays—and yet, they're actually virgins.

The End of the Suburbs NONFICTION
by Leigh Gallagher

Are your Pinterest boards all-white picket fences, or are you more of a loft-apartment type of girl? In this exploration of the American Dream, Gallagher sheds light on where we want to live and why.

All Our Pretty Songs FICTION
by Sarah McCarry

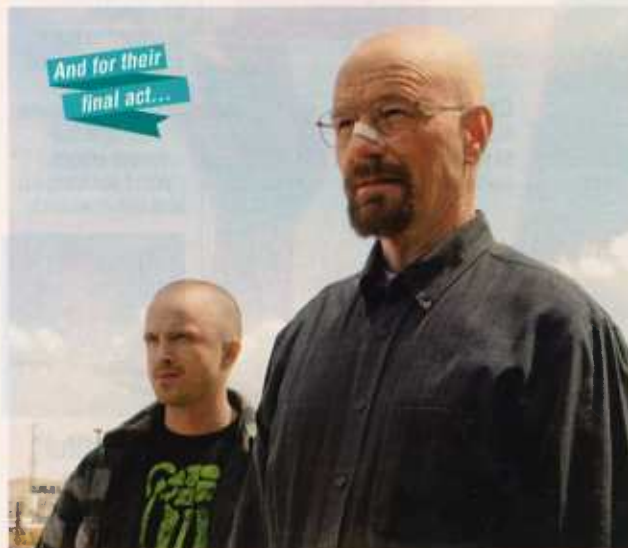

What matters most: friendship or love? In this hypnotic and gritty debut novel, two best friends with an unbreakable childhood bond wrestle with their devotion to each other when a mysterious man threatens to break them apart.

TV SHOWS

The Newsroom

SUN Love it or hate-watch it, HBO's workplace drama makes the Today show's Curry vs. Lauer battle look like child's play. Feel the second season's slow and steady burn, July 14 at 10 p.m.

Breaking Bad

SUN Will our favorite antihero Walter White finally get got? Will Jesse Pinkman find a normal life in the burbs? All will be revealed in the series' final season (August 11, AMC, 9 p.m.).

The Bridge

WED In this new series from a Homeland writer, Diane Kruger takes on the role of a detective tackling Asperger's and a grisly murder investigation on the U.S.–Mexico border (July 10, FX, 10 p.m.).

Turn Your Blog Into Bucks Who runs the World Wide Web? Girls! Rub shoulders with the A-list of women in social media at the ninth annual BlogHer conference, July 25 to 27 in Chicago. Tickets start at $149 ($99 for students) and include workshops on how to market and monetize your blog, pitch and publish your essays, and vlog like a pro. (Visit BlogHer.com for info and follow @BlogHer on Twitter.)